

The Dolphin Kingdom

Long ago, there was a dolphin kingdom in the sea. It was a paradise for all the dolphins to reside. With clean and crystal blue water, endless foods, comfortable environment and lovely neighbors, no one ever thought of leaving this place. Many generations have been living there blissfully.

The residents loved the king and the queen. To them, they are the living gods. However, the king never forgot mentioning one person to his dolphins, who was his beloved uncle.

‘Without my uncle, we won’t be able to live in such a peaceful and prosperous country. He is always my most respectful people in the world,’ the king always said.

All good things come to an end. The body of the king’s uncle was found by the seaside. He died of eating too much rubbish from the human world. The king was very upset and cried every day to mourn him.

For three months, he still couldn’t accept the hard truth. He turned his sadness to hate and decided to revenge his uncle. So he trained up a dolphin army to harm and kill people.

After 3 months, the king led his he dolphin up to a beach. ‘Attack now, go!’ said the King. The human were very delighted while the army was attacking them. In the eyes of human, they could only see dolphins performing in the sea. This was never his intention.

The king knew this plan failed completely. More dolphins were found dead due to the rubbish. He understood revenge was not a wise solution. Education was the key.

So he found a witch to turn him into human so that he could spread out the message. ‘You have one year to be human. On the last day, you have to go back to the sea. Otherwise you will die. Hahaha...’ said and laughed the witch.

When he got on the land, he rented a hot air balloon to fly over the world to promote the message. He first distributed the leaflets in Australia where his kingdom landed on.

Then he went to Paris, Germany, Italy etc to spread the message. Despite his efforts, no people cared his work. He was getting desperate and discouraged.

Yet, he still believed he could influence the people. On day 200, he arrived Hong Kong. This time, he decided to stay here to deliver the message. Meanwhile, he met some friends and enjoyed the life here very much. He almost forgot the purpose staying here.

One sunny day, his friends invited him to a beach for sunbathing and swimming. There was a lot of rubbish. He finally remembered his mission in the human world. He burst into tears. Everything was too late. He was turning back into a dolphin and struggling in tears and pain.

He was dead in few seconds. The crowd were so shocked but soon walked away. They showed no guilt and reflection. Until, thousands of dolphins suddenly jumped out of and into the sea water with scream, as if they were grieving for someone they loved.

Some observant people were aware of the situation but some didn't know. Soon, the scene spread very fast through social media. The photos attracted a lot of attention and resonated with the public. Many people took action to protect the oceans and sea lives. The king's death was worthy.
